

REPORT

We went to Ljubljana on Monday of September 27. There was an event called Language market in the underpass of Maximarket. There were stalls that represented 16 of 23 official languages of European Union.

We were able to speak with natural speakers of these languages and we could also take part in some sort of game. Different words and phrases were written on cards in 13 different languages and we had to find suitable Slovene translations for them. When we found five of them, we got a question that referred to languages or countries of European Union. If we answered correctly, we got a symbolic prize (a balloon or a pen).

There was also some sort of program going on. There were short conversations with the participants of the Language market, about the language and the country they represented. Mojca Mavec, Pavle Ravnohrib and Valentina Smej Novak were also talking about their experiences with different languages.

After we took a look at all of the stalls, we had a little time for ourselves and around two o'clock we headed home.

Urška Butara, Tanja Kastelic, Benjamin Ferlin, Tina Sinjur 3.b

One of the cards used in the game